LETTER FROM LEADERSHIP

At Waterville Creates, we believe that the arts are essential. They bring joy, meaning, and inspiration to our daily lives. Most importantly, they connect us to each other and remind us of what it means to be human.

Firmly grounded in the "for all" of our mission, Waterville Creates is guided by our core values of community, creativity, and collaboration, which are embodied in every program we present, every partnership we build, and every warm welcome we offer. We hold space on our stage, our screens, and our gallery walls, in our studios, and at our community events to honor diverse stories, identities, and lived experiences in real and authentic ways. These values provide the framework for this annual report.

In 2025, Waterville Creates recorded over 100,000 visits by community members of all ages. We experienced record-breaking attendance at the Waterville Opera House, and we hosted the largest Maine International Film Festival since the pandemic. Thousands of people made art with us and with their neighbors, and nearly 2,000 young people were empowered to choose their own arts adventure—seeing a movie, participating in theatre camp, taking an art class—by using the Youth Arts Access Fund.

While the numbers are undeniable, for me, the beauty lies in the personal stories, a selection of which you will find in these pages, with countless more held in the hearts of our community members. As this tapestry of shared arts experiences continues to grow and the stories intertwine, our community becomes more connected, happier, healthier, and more whole.

Waterville Creates is proud to be a catalyst for the light and life that have returned to downtown Waterville, and we are grateful for all of the individuals, businesses, and organizations who help to sustain our work; we simply would not be here without the support and investment of our community.

As I reflect on all that Waterville Creates has accomplished and the meaning that this organization brings to the lives of so many, I want to personally acknowledge our incredible staff, who show up every day with kindness, joy, and a deep commitment to creating programs and spaces where all are welcome and everyone belongs.

With gratitude,

Shannon Haines

WATERVILLE CREATES' MISSION IS

ARTS EXPERIENCES FOR ALL

We envision a community where all people enjoy transformative experiences in the arts.

	WHAT	HOW
COMMUNITY	Building a thriving, connected, and equitable community through shared experiences in the arts.	Promote growth and well-being via arts programming developed by, with, and for our community.
CREATIVITY	Creative expression plays a vital role in a fulfilled life and a vibrant community.	Nurture individual artistic endeavors at all levels and encourage all creative outlets.
COLLABORATION	Energize and enrich all facets of our community through the power of collaboration.	Work with fellow creatives, arts and cultural organizations, and other strategic partners to identify needs and shape our programming.
DIVERSITY, EQUITY + INCLUSION	Honor and celebrate the array of identities in our local and broader communities, including those that are not part of the predominant culture.	Present diverse stories, identities, and lived experiences in real and authentic ways throughout our programming.

COMMUNITY

WHAT: Building a thriving, connected, and equitable community through shared experiences in the arts.

HOW: Promote growth and well-being via arts programming developed by, with, and for our community.

Youth Arts Access Fund

Entering its fourth year, the Youth Arts Access Fund (YAAF) continues to provide youth aged 18 and under—regardless of income, ability, or background—with access to outstanding arts programming and arts education opportunities.

Through the free or pay-what-you-can tickets available through YAAF, families in Waterville and surrounding communities have seen movies at the Maine Film Center, attended theatre camps and performances at the Waterville Opera House, channeled their creativity through art-making and ceramics classes and camps at Ticonic Gallery + Studios, and much more.

To reserve a ticket, all a recipient needs to do is ask to use YAAF when they call or visit the Ed Harris Box Office—no questions asked, no proof of need necessary.

On the importance of making these arts activities as open and accessible as possible, Waterville Creates President + CEO Shannon Haines says, "Numerous studies have concluded that young people who participate in the arts experience a wide range of positive outcomes, but we also know that not all youth have equal access to arts opportunities. YAAF is one of the initiatives that I am personally most proud of because it removes cost as a barrier. It is a clear and measurable demonstration of Waterville Creates' commitment to our mission of arts experiences for all."

Maine Arts Commission Chair Bob Keyes described YAAF as presenting "a national model" for youth access to arts, and the impacts of the program are felt across the community and in the lives of individuals every day. One local teen testified to the power of YAAF in their life, saying, "The Youth Arts Access Fund has been a huge help, and I just think it boosts community."

The fund has no formal budget or endowment: it is entirely supported by donations and corporate sponsorships (including major support from partners such as the Colby Center for the Arts and Humanities, the T-Mobile Foundation, Dirigo Wealth Management, One River CPAs, and Waterville Area Women's Club) as well as a portion of all ticket sales.

"I'm incredibly proud of our ability to provide this resource. There are few things that make my heart happier than to see families share the incredible gift of experiencing live performances at our historic venue together without stressing the family budget. I'm thrilled to be growing the next generation of arts enthusiasts with the Youth Arts Access Fund."

– Michelle Sweet, Waterville Opera House Executive Director

YOUTH ARTS ACCESS FUND

$268,000+	Value of free arts experiences YAAF has provided for area children and teens since 2022
Over 6,800	Young people served
Top YAAF Usage	Family tickets to Waterville Opera House productions

"The Youth Arts Access Fund combines my love for the arts with my desire to help the community. I was at a show at the Opera House, and I heard about the fund in the curtain speech and thought, I have to support that. I have a soft spot for children, and I want to do what I can to give them opportunities. I give a percentage of every single paycheck to YAAF; sometimes it is a little, sometimes it is a lot, but I always give something."

– Alex Green, YAAF donor

Waterville Opera House Gives Back

"We asked ourselves, 'What does it look like for us to get more involved with the community?"

That's what Waterville Creates Box Office Manager Joshua Veilleux and his 25 staff members pondered during a regular front-of-house staff meeting as the production season kicked off. The team wanted to think creatively about how their operations could contribute to their audience's lives and the community at large.

"We thought about the upcoming production of Matilda," Veilleux recalls. The staff explored the themes present in the story, what the characters' journeys were like, and what some aligned organizations in the community might be and what their clients might need.

"The thing that stood out to us was the magic of reading—its power to provide an escape from the world we live in, and how it helps you to imagine a better life."

The team loved the idea of a book drive, and made quick work of turning their idea into a reality. They set up bins at the box office, put out the word on social media, email, and other communications channels, and waited for audiences to respond.

"It was a huge success," Veilleux remarked, still appearing a bit stunned. "We collected over 430 books, which we distributed to KVCAP, the South End Teen Center, Maine Home for Little Wanderers, two local soup kitchens, and some local shelters for the homeless. It was a heartwarming experience for me, to see the reactions of the book recipients and the way they felt seen in the larger context of the community."

"The thing that stood out to us was the magic of reading—its power to provide an escape from the world we live in, and how it helps you to imagine a better life."

– Joshua Veilleux, Waterville Creates Box Office Manager

Riding off that high, the team looked ahead to their next production: the classic holiday musical, White Christmas.

One major theme of the story is "what is life after serving in the military?" Veilleux's family is involved in the local VFW, and for him, it was a no-brainer to highlight local veterans. The team developed a plan: each of the art-making carts in the Waterville Creates complex would become a station for folks to create a greeting card for veterans, which would be sent to recipients at the VFW and at the Wounded Warriors Project.

The public's reception was overwhelmingly positive once again. "It was so sweet seeing little kids come in—sometimes weeks before the show—to sit down and write a card and then drop it off at the box office," Veilleux said, smiling.

WOH Executive Director Michelle Sweet was similarly affected by the community's response. For Sweet, these initiatives make the production more tangible, and include the patrons in the creative process in a way that they wouldn't otherwise be involved.

"They come away having seen a fantastic story presented exceptionally well, with wonderful production value, and also they got to make someone's life richer, through the donation of a book in the Matilda book drive, and I even heard of some folks who made it a family event to go pick out the books together."

57	Live concert/comedy/ variety shows
58,000	Patrons across all events
57	Volunteer performers

She concluded, "It's about thinking of others outside of yourself and your own little capsule of the world. The way these initiatives were developed is reflective of that value—of the staff coming together with a shared vision of giving back, thinking creatively, and amplifying our efforts beyond each of our individual abilities. Seeing this become so successful, how it has been received by our audiences and the wider community, has been an absolute delight."

Waterville Rocks 2025

Music fans of all ages gathered on the lawn of Head of Falls Park for the ninth annual Waterville Rocks music festival, lounging on the banks of the Kennebec River in lawn chairs and on picnic blankets, heads bobbing and bodies swaying to the beat.

The free outdoor summer concert series produced by Waterville Creates and the Waterville Opera House was a smashing success yet again, welcoming more than 3,000 people across the four concerts, which featured performances by Adam Ezra Group with Bella Ann, Allman Brothers tribute band End of the Line, Southern Rock band Atlanta Rhythm Section, and indie rock/Americana/country group Mallett Brothers Band.

During each of the Friday night concerts in July and August, audience members gathered for a pint at the adjoining beer garden, took a moment for creativity and art-making at the Art Rocks booth, and chatted with their neighbors while basking in the precious Maine summer evenings.

CREATIVITY

WHAT: Creative expression plays a vital role in a fulfilled life and a vibrant community.

HOW: Nurture individual artistic endeavors at all levels and encourage all creative outlets.

Youth Art Month

In the spring of 2025, Ticonic Gallery once again partnered with Colby Arts to celebrate the 11th annual Youth Art Month (YAM) with an inspiring multisite exhibition for area schoolchildren. The year's YAM theme was "Healing Through Color."

More than 400 K–12 students from 31 area schools had the opportunity to see their work—including painting, sculpture and pottery, photography, digital art, and more—exhibited in a professional gallery setting for an audience of thousands throughout the month of March. More than 800 attended the opening night reception alone.

Established in 1961, Youth Art Month is a national initiative spearheaded by the Council for Art Education to emphasize the value of art education for all children and to encourage support for quality school art programs.

Youth Art Month 2025 was sponsored by the Colby College Museum of Art, Kennebec Savings Bank, Central Maine Newspapers, the City of Waterville, and the Colby Center for the Arts and Humanities.

MADE: Maine Makers Market

Even as the winter cold set in, Ticonic Gallery was full of warmth, artistry, and craftsmanship at the annual MADE Maine Makers Market.

The curated seasonal marketplace, formerly known as the Holiday Bazaar, showcased the renowned quality and charm of Maine's artists and makers over the course of the holiday and winter season. The rebranded and expanded market offered more than 2,500 visitors a chance to browse and shop a unique selection of locally handmade goods by 100 artisans from mid-November 2025 through the end of January 2026.

A wide array of items was available—including art prints, toys, clothes, jewelry, dishware, home decor, body care and beauty products, and much more—showcasing Maine's talents in wood, clay, textiles, painting, metalworking, and other art forms. Ceramic pieces created by members of Ticonic's Art of Clay Studio were also available for purchase.

The market welcomed shoppers six days a week, and extending its run through January—made possible through the support of Kennebec Savings Bank, the City of Waterville, Central Maine Newspapers, and Back Office Solutions—meant this season's market had the best sales to date.

Shaping a Good Morning

The lights are low. Relaxing music softly plays from the speakers. People trickle into the studio taking their seats at a long table.

Educator and class host Candy Andre takes her place at the end of the table, and asks if the adults assembled have ever worked with clay before. A few hands go up, and Andre smiles warmly, welcoming the experienced and inexperienced students alike with excitement.

"The majority of my new Morning Clay students haven't worked with clay before," Andre notes. "My usual go-to for beginners is a simple pinch-pot design. I walk attendees through the steps, demonstrating how to roll the clay in a small ball, pushing my thumb down into the middle, then shaping the clay into a shallow bowl. We try to make time to play with slips and glazes, too."

Morning Clay is a weekly small-group hand-building ceramics class for adults with intellectual and developmental disabilities. Andre founded the class with support from clay studio staff, and it caught on quickly with the public.

Andre credits this to strong word-of-mouth and the fact that, through a generous grant from the Maine Community Foundation, she and Clay Studio Coordinator Jeffrey Lipton were able to recraft Morning Clay as a pay-what-you-can course.

Every class is built with accessibility—as Andre says, "I want every person to come through those doors and feel safe and supported and to have a good experience with clay"—and participants who require assistance are encouraged to attend with support staff, free of charge.

The creative expression and connection students find in Morning Clay classes keep students coming back and lead to remarkable transformations. The Tuesday morning regulars have progressed in their skills so much, Andre has had to dig deep into her curriculum for more advanced projects. Friday morning newcomers—some with high-support needs—are able to explore clay for the first time, delighting in the tactile sensory experience.

"For us, it's not about the end product. It's about the process of art-making that makes a difference," Andre comments. "It's a fundamental human experience."

She continues, "Clay is accessible to everyone. It will meet you where you're at as an artist. I believe it is a therapeutic and grounding experience to make art with something that comes from the earth. As a medium, the possibilities are endless as to what you can make—whether it be an ornamental or functional piece, thrown on the wheel, hand-built, or a combination of the two."

For Morning Clay participants, the possibilities of clay, plus the unfettered creative expression in the welcoming environment Andre and Waterville Creates offer, have unlocked a whole new world. Andre is excited to see how the program takes form in the future.

Bringing the World to Waterville

Waterville Creates connected with Maine Film Center Executive Director Mike Perreault to discuss the work he and his team do at the Film Center, and the growth and successes of the Maine International Film Festival (MIFF).

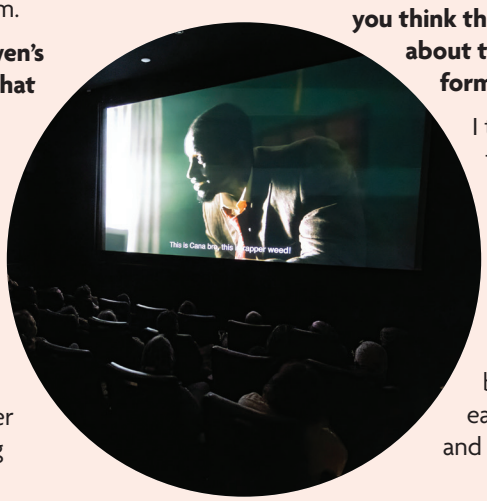

Tell us a bit about you and your journey to the arts. What drew you to film as a medium?

I grew up in Aroostook County in a small town surrounded by trees and potatoes. We didn't have a local movie theater, and going to the movies meant a long trip and a special occasion. When I moved to Waterville to attend Colby College, I had the opportunity to encounter film academically and to participate in the joy of cinema with audiences at Railroad Square Cinema. The benefits of having a nationally recognized theater in town became immediately clear to me: the conversations, discoveries, friendships, revelry, and popcorn were unlike anything I'd experienced to that point. My first internship after college was with MIFF, and the rest of the past 15 years is history: I've returned each year and have been honored to serve as director of MIFF for nine of them. When I left home, I wouldn't have imagined that Waterville would be the place that connected me to the world through film and, today, I'm grateful to continue this work.

What trends have you seen in viewership and attendance lately?

We have a dedicated audience that has supported the Maine Film Center and MIFF since their beginnings, as well as deep partnerships with businesses and organizations throughout Maine. As a first-run, independent art house, we screen films that draw audiences from Maine and around the world to experience them for the first time in Waterville. And our school field trip program enables many young people to experience the cinema for the first time with programs that align with what they learn in the classroom.

2025's MIFF was a big one, with Clive Owen's and Ken Eisen's Achievement Awards. What were your highlights from that festival?

Welcoming Clive Owen to Maine was incredible. We screened six of his films, and he generously and openly engaged with the audience to share his perspectives on his work. It was also an honor to celebrate Ken Eisen's career as a founder of Railroad Square Cinema and MIFF, and to recognize his impact as a programmer and film distributor.Another highlight was The Librarians, our Opening Night film. We welcomed dozens of librarians from all across the state of Maine to come and celebrate, watch, and take part. The Waterville Public Library hosted a gathering before the screening, and they all marched down together in solidarity of their work—which was such a powerful moment—to the Waterville Opera House, where the director of the film, Kim A. Snyder, opened the festival with her documentary.

MIFF28 had a record number of film submissions. Why do you think that was, and what do you think that says about the state of the industry and the art form?

I think the quality of our program speaks for itself, and filmmakers continue to take notice. After 28 years, we've also built a broad network of connections and lasting relationships with other festivals. Interest in screening at MIFF is also driven by the creation of the Tourmaline Prizes, juried awards that celebrate the best made-in-Maine films of the festival each year. We also have the best projection and sound in Maine.

Were there any sleeper hits or films that received an especially warm reception last year?

A Moment in the Sun was a big standout. It's a documentary by Mia Weinberger made in Houlton, Maine about the total solar eclipse of 2024. Houlton was the last place that the totality would be seen in the U.S., and the film documents how the town of 6,000 rallied together to welcome over 30,000 visitors to celebrate this celestial moment. The filmmaking was so brilliant: it was probably one of my favorites of the 2025 festival, and certainly one of the audience's as well. It deservedly won the Best Feature for the Tourmaline Prize.

Maine Student Film + Video Festival

Maine students in grades K–12 got a special opportunity to showcase their own film projects on the big screen for the professional filmmakers and international audience assembled during the culminating weekend of MIFF28.

"It's an incredible opportunity for young filmmakers to screen their works as part of an international film festival," Perreault said. "They're able to make connections with filmmakers from Maine and around the world. With free admission for the public and several prizes in store at each edition of MSFVF, we're proud to celebrate the best young filmmakers in Maine in this way."

COLLABORATION

WHAT: Energize and enrich all facets of our community through the power of collaboration.

HOW: Work with fellow creatives, arts and cultural organizations, and other strategic partners to identify needs and shape our programming.

Wabanaki Artisan Celebration

Through hands-on workshops, artisan markets, storytelling sessions, musical performances, history discussions, and a special film screening, Waterville community members got an immersive look at the art, craftsmanship, and culture of the Wabanaki Nations at Waterville Creates' Wabanaki Artisan Celebration event last fall.

Passamaquoddy potter, leather maker, and Art of Clay Studio member Cassandra Rose was one of the 20+ Wabanaki Nations artists who collaborated on the event. The workshop led by Rose, exploring centuries-old clay carving and sgraffito techniques, opened up the day-long celebration.

Rose reflected on the importance of events like this for Mainers: "Holding this event at this time affirms the strength of Wabanaki culture and creates space for deeper connection between artisans and the wider community. It's not only about honoring the past, but about celebrating who we are and where we are going."

The afternoon Wabanaki Artisan Market in Castonguay Square featured work for sale from seven Wabanaki artists, including candles and pressed botanicals by Wiphulakson's Nicole Paul, beadwork by Belinda Miliano of Crafts from the Bay, salves and candles by Tiana Aurelio of People of the Dawn Apothecary, and works by Rose's Nisuwok Wiphunsisok studio.

An enthralling performance by Mi'kmaq storyteller and flute maker/player David Lone Bear Sanipass at midday was followed by a drumming performance by the Huntley Brook Singers.

Closing out the day's event, the Maine Film Center hosted a free screening of the film The Doctrine of Discovery: Unmasking the Domination Code. The documentary illuminates 15th-century Vatican documents that resulted in a tragic global campaign of domination and dehumanization, leading to the creation of legal systems in the United States and Canada and elsewhere in the world that are still weaponized against Original Nations and Peoples to this day. After the film, special guest Dwayne Tomah, Passamaquoddy language teacher and cultural preservationist, hosted a Q+A session with the audience.

"The Wabanaki Artisan Celebration was a meaningful reminder of the strength, creativity, and resilience within the Wabanaki community. It was an honor to help plan the event and lead a clay carving workshop that encouraged storytelling, connection, and shared learning through art.

Programs like this create space for collaboration, cultural visibility, and community healing, and I'm grateful to have been part of a community at Waterville Creates that honors that and continues to build those relationships moving forward."

– Cassandra Rose, Artist

Maine Art Education Association Conference

Waterville Creates, in partnership with the Colby College Museum of Art and Colby Arts, was thrilled to host the 2025 Maine Art Education Association (MAEA) spring conference. The conference celebrated the importance of creativity and the arts for young people, and it provided arts educators from around the state with an opportunity to connect with one another, learn together, and receive encouragement and appreciation for their oft-unsung work.

In addition to professional development sessions, conferencegoers were treated to hands-on art-making mini-retreats and "field trips" that spotlit the vibrant art spaces and creative community in Waterville.

Serena Sanborn, Waterville Creates' Manager of Outreach and Community Partnerships and MAEA conference contributor, remarked, "Having been to conferences like this, we knew that if you can help support and inspire one teacher, you're also reaching the hundreds of children they teach each week."

The conference was offered to attendees almost completely free of charge, and through a generous grant by partners at Colby College, underwritten scholarships were also available for educators who needed stipends for travel and accommodations.

Sanborn emphasized the importance of the conference's accessibility: "I talked to one attendee, an art teacher and single mom, who had never been to a professional conference before because of the expense. She was able to attend because of the free admission and the financial support she received for her travel. Because of our supporters, teachers like her got one-of-a-kind professional development, and that impact will ripple forward to thousands of young humans."

"Having been to conferences like this, we knew that if you can help support and inspire one teacher, you're also reaching the hundreds of children they teach each week."

The Waterville Creates team also looked to expand on the typical resources provided. They helped support educators with insights on Wabanaki art and history by inviting the Maine Department of Education's Lead on Wabanaki Teaching to offer curriculum and connections to art and tribal history, and held dance and movement classes with educators to look beyond just visual art and find ways to incorporate the body.

To close the conference, the Colby Museum put on an awards ceremony for the attendees, a la The Met Gala, complete with a multi-course meal, awards, speeches, and guests in their finery. To provide an opportunity for gratitude and appreciation for these hard-working educators—who often face such strong headwinds in their work, between expanding class sizes and the ever-diminishing public funding for their programs—was rewarding to see for the conference coordinators.

Sanborn delightedly recalled, "Everyone felt so appreciated and cared for. It was amazing."

Wild Maybes: Gentle Giants in the Park

Viewers could almost feel the deep rumbles of the monumental prehistoric beasts' footsteps—but rather than Jurassic Park-style terror, these creatures brought smiles, giggles, and fun to Levine's Park, courtesy of Portland-based artist Chris Miller.

Commissioned by Waterville Creates and presented in partnership with the City of Waterville, The Wild Maybes of the Long Green Between is a semi-permanent installation featuring four large-scale sculptures of whimsical, friendly creatures, in the tradition of the Crystal Palace dinosaurs. These fantastical beasts drew inspiration from real prehistoric mammals that roamed the earth 50 to 60 million years ago—just after the age of dinosaurs.

Wild Maybes is the latest piece in a broader initiative by Waterville Creates to promote public art, following a community-wide survey which showed overwhelming support for public art: 70% of respondents wanted to see more public art in Waterville, and over 80% agreed it enhances quality of life and fosters community pride.

Wild Maybes artist Chris Miller

"This project reflects our community's strong desire for more public art, and we're thrilled to welcome Wild Maybes as a joyful and imaginative presence in downtown Waterville," said Marie Sugden, Exhibitions Coordinator at Waterville Creates.

Of the collaboration, artist Miller says, "Working with Waterville Creates on this project was an absolute dream. They were such kind, supportive and steadfast partners. Shannon and Marie introduced me to key partners and members of the community early on, and we worked together to choose just the right site. I was given very generous creative latitude, and the guidance I received helped to keep the project grounded in value to the community."

Miller found the response from the community heartwarming, too. "The opening event for Wild Maybes was spectacular, and I had an amazing time working with the Waterville Creates after-school art club following that. It was such an exciting and rewarding project."

Around 500 people attended the opening of Wild Maybes at the September 2025 First Friday block party.

FY2025 FINANCIALS

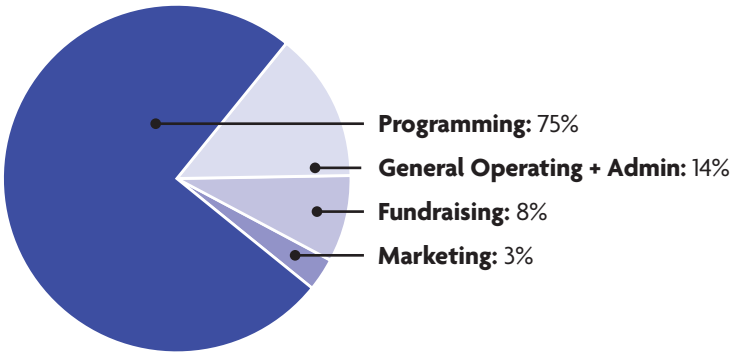

As a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization, Waterville Creates receives significant contributions from individuals, businesses, foundations, and government sources. Ticket revenues and program fees cover less than 50% of our annual budget, which makes this public support critical to our ability to offer outstanding, accessible arts programming. We offer our sincere thanks to the donors recognized throughout this report for their generous contributions.

These financials reflect our annual operating budget and do not include capitalized expenses or depreciation.

REVENUE: $6,171,172

EXPENSES: $6,019,668

Earned Income

Paid admissions for movies, theatre productions, concerts, and classes, concessions revenue, sales of artwork and merchandise.

Grant Funds

Grant funds from private foundations, federal and state government.

Community Support

Memberships, sponsorships, and contributions from businesses and individuals.

Programming

Artist fees, supplies, rights and royalties, event and program staff.

Marketing

Direct marketing and advertising costs, marketing staff.

General Operating + Admin

Office expenses, insurance, accounting, administrative staff.

Fundraising

Direct fundraising costs, fundraising staff expense.
